We acknowledge and pay our respects to the traditional custodians of the land we meet on today, and their Elders past, present, and emerging.

We also wish to acknowledge and respect the continuing culture, strength, and resilience of all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and communities.

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Culture

- Rich, ancient culture and history of 60,000-75,000 years
 - Original theories of arrival initially disputed
 - Now recognised as one of the oldest living populations in the world
 - Colonisation occurred ~200 years ago (landed 1770, colonised 1788)
- Strength and resilience of peoples
- Large diversity of language groups and cultures, originally >250

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Disadvantage

Australia population of 24.19 million people

- 3% (798,400 people) identify as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander
- Lower life expectancy, average rates of income, home ownership, employment, and education
 - Life expectancy of Indigenous people up to 9 years lower than other Australians
 - Death rates higher across all age groups
- Higher rates of infant death, homicide death, arrest and imprisonment
 - Infant death rates 2 to 3 times other Australians rates
 - Homicide death rates 6 times higher

Suicide Statistics

Mainly due to historical and political determinants for Indigenous Australians

6% of all deaths among Indigenous peoples (vs 2% non-Indigenous).

2nd leading cause of death for Indigenous males (vs 10th non-Indigenous).

7th leading cause of death for Indigenous females (vs 23rd non-Indigenous).

40% of all Indigenous youth deaths (ages 5 to 17).

23% of all suicide deaths in Australian children (ages 5 to 17) are Indigenous.

Why is there a Mental Health and Suicide Gap?

Alcohol and other Drug use

Kimberley region of Western Australia (WA)

- Suicide rate of 52 per 100,000 people (16 WA; 12 Australia)
- 3x higher emergency department (ED) attendance for self-harm than rest of WA
 - Highest rates in ages 15-19 and 20-24 years
 - 80% of ED attendance for self-harm involved alcohol

Western Australia

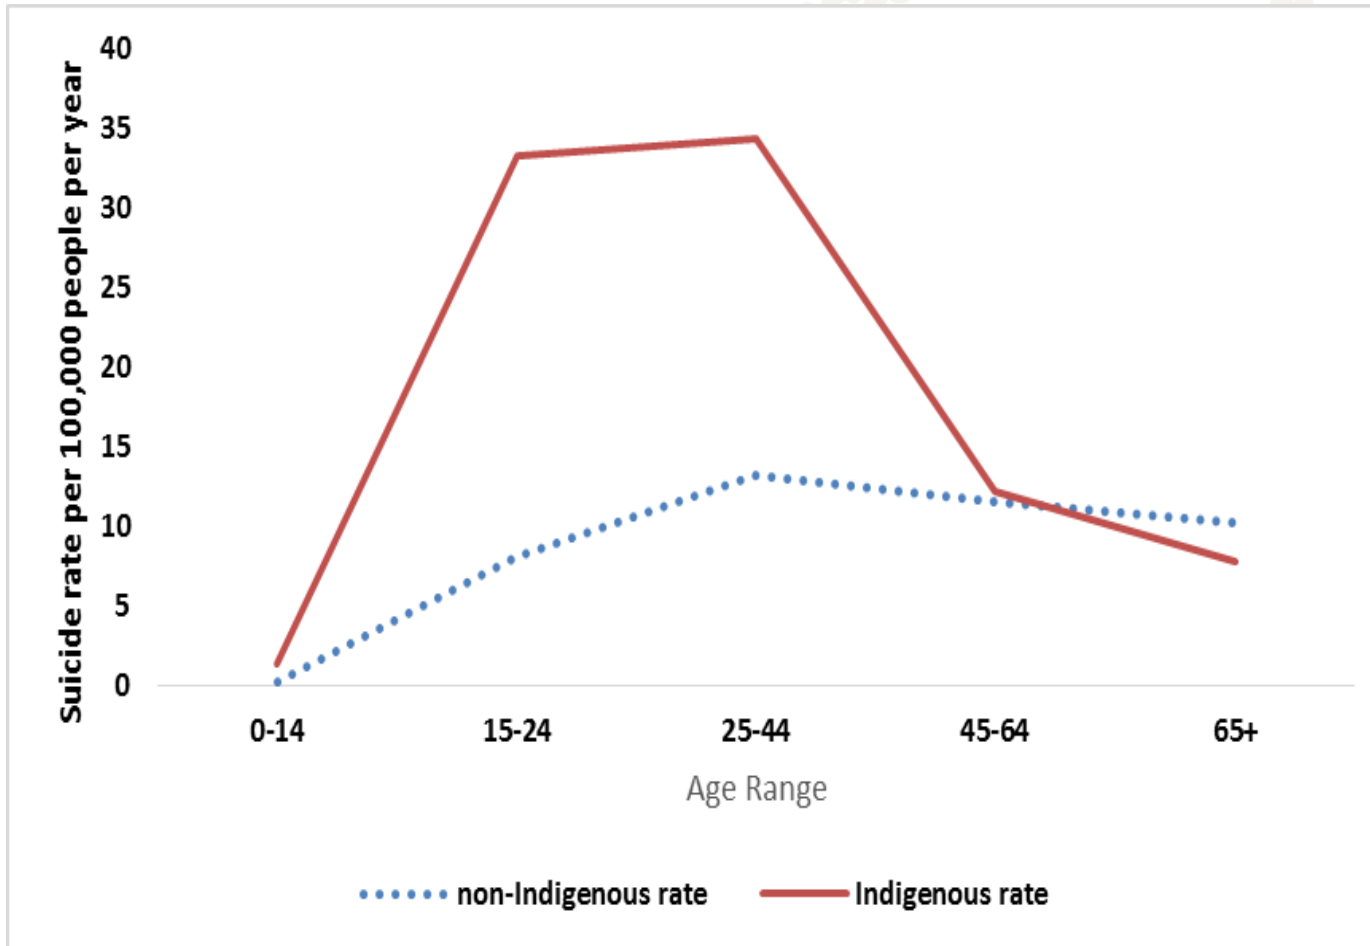

- 22% of ED presentations involved alcohol (13% Australia)
- 3% of ED presentations involved methamphetamine (3% Australia)

McPhee et al., 2021

Australia Bureau of Statistics 2019

ACEM Alcohol and Other Drug Harm Snapshot Survey 2019

Suicide Statistics - Youth

- Aboriginal youth most at risk of suicide, especially males ages 17 to 23.
- Among 15 to 24 year olds, the rates of intentional self-harm are 5 times higher than non-Indigenous youth.

Intentional Self-harm by Age

Age-specific rates for intentional self-harm by Indigenous status
2013 - 2017

- Leading cause of death for Indigenous age 15 to 34 years
 - > 3 times non-Indigenous Australians
 - 67% of all Indigenous self-harm deaths
- Higher rates in younger cohorts in Indigenous vs older cohorts in non-Indigenous
- Median age at death
 - Indigenous: 30 years vs non-Indigenous: 45 years
- Indigenous age-specific suicide rates decrease with age

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Suicide Rates

Cumulative impact of complex, interrelated factors that heighten self-harm and suicide risk:

- Ongoing exposure to socio-economic disadvantage and multiple psychological stressors
- Grief and loss from
 - premature deaths/suicide of family, community members and friends
 - dislocation and forced removal of children
 - mistreatment
- Violence and inter-personal conflict
- Transgenerational trauma
- Pervasive racism and discrimination at individual, institutional and system levels
- Loss of sense of purpose and meaning in life
- Poor health (physical and mental) and SEWB, and co-morbidities
- 'Access' gap to mental health services:
 - 34.5% of Indigenous peoples who reported (very) high rates of psychological distress also experience access problems to health services.

Why did we need ATSIPEP?

- Indigenous Suicide has many causes, including cultural, historical, political and other unknown considerations.
- The development of an evidence base for what works in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander suicide prevention.

ATSISPEP Overall Messages

- Community control and empowerment: projects grounded in community, community-owned, based on community needs and accountable to the community.
- Holistic: Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander definitions of health; incorporating spirituality, culture and healing.
- Sustainable, strength based and capacity building: sustainable projects that build community capacity and endure until community is empowered; not 'one off'.
- Partnerships: work in genuine partnerships with local Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander stakeholders and other providers to support and enhance (not duplicate or compete with) local measures.
- Safe cultural delivery: delivered in a safe manner.
- Innovation and evaluation: build on learnings, try new and innovative approaches, share learnings, and improve the evidence base.

CBPATSIISP

- Australia's leading authority on Indigenous suicide
- Reduce impact of suicide in Indigenous communities, by
- Promoting self-determination and respecting Indigenous culture

Aims:

1. Identify international and Australian research and evaluations for best practice in Indigenous suicide prevention through an Indigenous 'lens', community organisations, and Primary Health Networks
2. Identify the need for, and facilitate, innovative research to support the identification of best practice
3. Promote and disseminate best practice to stakeholders through clearing houses, website, conferences

Clinicians & Front-Line Workers

RESOURCES FOR CLINICIANS & FRONT-LINE WORKFORCES

Clinicians, including psychologists, psychiatrists, emergency medicine specialists, GPs and nurses, have important roles to play in supporting the mental health and social and emotional wellbeing of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, and in preventing suicide.

Other front-line workers who provide services to Indigenous people can also make essential contributions. Social workers, youth workers, and any staff who support community programs and services, need to understand how Indigenous people may exhibit distress and how to respond to individuals, families and whole communities.

For some professionals, supporting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people's mental health and social and emotional wellbeing will be part of their education, training and supervision. For many others, their development in these domains will occur in the workplace, with limited formal oversight.

All workforces need to understand how to work with Indigenous people in a culturally responsive and safe way that supports positive and trusting relationships.

This section of the Manual includes resources that apply in all these situations.

SHARE YOUR PROGRAM

Do you have a good program or service in suicide prevention that is working well in your community or organisation?

The Centre of Best Practice in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Suicide Prevention (CBPATSISP) evaluates and promotes suicide prevention practice that empowers Indigenous individuals, families and communities and respects their culture.

The CBPATSISP Clearing House shares promising and best practice programs and services in order to recognise the important work that communities are doing and supports Primary Health Networks and service organisations to further develop their own suicide prevention initiatives.

We are interested in programs and services that build resilience, empower people, and build community and cultural connection, for example through sports or arts, as well as more specific social and emotional wellbeing and suicide prevention services.

If your program or service can assist others to identify successful approaches to address suicide, we want to hear from you. Please register your interest on the Share Your Program tab on the CBPATSISP website.

For more information, please refer to the guidelines at www.cbpatsisp.com.au.

After we hear from you, a member of our team will contact you to finalise your listing in the CBPATSISP Clearing House website.

Best Practice Programs and Services – Criteria

1 Indigenous Ownership

Develop, implement, lead, deliver and governance of programs and services

2 Community Leadership

The program or service works within (or with) local Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Service, and/or has relationships or integrates with Indigenous community organisations, programs or services

3 Community Consultation and Co-design

An Indigenous community reference group established, which includes key stakeholders of target group (e.g., youths, Elders, lived experience, LGBTQI)

4 Evaluation

Ongoing program or service evaluation to ensure continuous quality improvement

5 Cultural Responsiveness

Non-Indigenous staff undertake cultural responsiveness and safety training

6 Capacity Building

The program builds Indigenous community capacity through training, mentoring and support of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to lead and deliver future programs or services

On behalf of Professor Pat Dudgeon, NACCHO, and Gayaa Dhuwi (Proud Spirit) we extend an invitation to our:

SOCIAL & EMOTIONAL WELLBEING GATHERING

Bringing together community leaders, services, front line workers, and experts to create a national Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander SEWB blueprint for our future.

About the Gathering

TIMHWP acknowledges the essential role of community-led initiatives in creating effective change and empowerment for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, as well as the critical role of policy and funding support.

PURPOSE: to bring together SEWB leaders and experts from community organisations, academia, and policy contexts to talk about SEWB.

Through focused roundtable discussions, we invite you to share what you have been doing in your organisation and what you envisage and plan for the future of SEWB in your organisation and more broadly.

Fact Sheet: Social and Emotional Wellbeing

In this factsheet some of the principles, domains, and determinants related to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander perspectives of Social and Emotional Wellbeing (SEWB) are presented within a holistic framework. This framework is consistent with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander ways of knowing, being, and doing, and it recognises the importance of culture and history as important factors that, inform and guide better health care for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

Holistic health

"Aboriginal health does not (just) mean the physical wellbeing of an individual, but refers to the social, emotional, and cultural wellbeing of the whole community... Health care services should strive to achieve this (whole-of-life) state where every individual is able to achieve their full potential as human beings and must bring about the total wellbeing of their communities."

National Aboriginal and Islander Health Organisation, 1979

The National Aboriginal Health Strategy (1989) and Ways Forward report (1995) used this definition of health to further develop holistic Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander understanding of wellbeing - or what is now commonly described as social and emotional wellbeing (SEWB).

SEWB incorporates an ecological, collectivist perspective of self that is intrinsically embedded within family, community, and extended kinship and clan group networks. Connections to land, culture, and spirituality shape these networks. Mental wellbeing is an important component of SEWB, but needs to be viewed as only one component of health that is inextricably linked to the social, emotional, physical, cultural, and spiritual dimensions of wellbeing.

This view of health requires pathways of healing to be in harmony with a holistic world-view. Healing for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples is often viewed as a collective and relational process involving physical, social, emotional, mental, environmental, and spiritual wellbeing.

Indigenous knowledge systems are life-affirming and fundamental to restoring vital connections to the domains of SEWB. While there is great diversity in the way these dimensions of wellbeing are manifest in the knowledge systems of different Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander groups and Indigenous people's worldwide, this broad understanding of health and healing is shared by many Indigenous peoples across the world.

National Mental Health and SEWB Framework

The National Strategic Framework for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples' Mental Health and Social and Emotional Wellbeing (2017) is the community-endorsed, guiding national document that defines the evolving understandings of SEWB among Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and communities.

The National Aboriginal Health Strategy (1989) underpinned the development of nine principles by Indigenous SEWB experts in consultation with communities. These principles are the foundation of culturally safe and responsive work with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. Programs adopting these principles are more likely to be successful in supporting the health and wellbeing of Aboriginal peoples and communities.

‘Self Determination’, ‘quality of life’, ‘well being’...these are terms that have only recently entered the vocabulary of mental health professionals working in Indigenous settings. They are unfamiliar and handled with uncertainty and at times temerity. But they are also unavoidable.

(Ernest Hunter, 1997, p. 6)

Professionals, their organisations and management groups in the mental health field need to learn to work with Aboriginal people and not to continue to work on them.
